W. C. T. U. ACTIVITIES.

At a recent meeting of the Central Committee of the Bedford County Woman's Christian Temperance Union it was decided to adopt the National Plan for an intensive membership drive between May 1 and 10.

All local unions of the county are urged to plan accordingly for the enlistment of all temperance women as regular members and men as Honorary members.

Committees from the Bedford Union will canvass the town within the coming week when it is hoped the Christian women of our community interested in the issue making for the permanency of the home will unite with the W. C. T. U. for the strengthening of moral sentiment in favor of righteous laws and their enforcement.

A successful itinerary of the county was made in March by State President, Miss Ella M. George.

New organizations are being effected and local unions strengthened.

Bedford will be the hostess of the county Convention on or about June 15 and 16, which promises to be the best convention yet held.

News of the death of Rev. Dr. John S. Souser, one of the most vigorous leaders of Methodism, which occurred Wednesday afternoon, April 20th, at his home 443 Catawissa Ave., Sunbury, was received with genuine sorrow throughout Central Pennsylvania where for thirty three years he served as pastor in the following places:—Blaine, Catawissa Circuit, Eedsville, Fourth St. Williamsport, Everett, Huntingdon first church and, Lincoln St. Shamokin. He was then appointed district superintendent of Sunbury District where he served three years. No district superintendent had more loyal support nor achieved greater success. He was a trustee of the children's home at Mechanicsburg and a Director of Dickinson Seminary and in all branches of church work, he was one of Bishop McDowell's closest advisers. When he was taken suddenly ill and asked to be retired from active work he asked the Bishop to appoint Dr. J. E. A. Bucke his successor which was done at the Annual Conference of the church.

He was a son of Sylvester and Mary Eshelman Souser and was born near Napier, July 1, 1863. For several years he taught in the county having been a teacher in the Borough schools here and was several years principal of the Saxton schools. He is survived by his wife, his aged father, two sisters, Mrs. A. J. Shaffer and Mrs. Samuel Lee of near Bedford and Mr. Shoreswood J. Souser of Wilmot, S. D. The funeral which was held Monday afternoon was largely attended by ministers and laymen of the church also by members of the Masonic fraternity. Eighty ministers were present, a member of whom spoke during the service.

CONCERT BY HIGH SCHOOL ORCHESTRA

Friday Evening, May 6th.

The students of the High School who are musically inclined have been spending a great deal of time and effort in preparing for a concert to be presented next Friday Evening. It will consist of full orchestra numbers, solos, selections by a violin ensemble, and a ukelele chorus. The program will be given entirely by school talent, and is worthy of your patronage, as all the proceeds will be used for purchasing instruments and music.

The primary purpose is to give training and experience in orchestral work to young players. It is the practice in many such organizations to accept as members only those who have already had some experience, and who are more or less proficient upon their various instruments, but by devoting, each week, several periods of school time to the music work, many players, who were practically beginners, have been trained and developed until they are, at present, able to handle creditably a rather high grade of music. This policy, we believe, has been, and will continue to be, an incentive to students, to take up and study orchestral instruments; and the school will thus be enabled to supplement the excellent work already being done by the adult musical organizations of our town.

Bedford may well be proud of its musical talent. Few towns of its size are able to boast of a band, a ladies' orchestra, a men's orchestra and a high school orchestra, to say nothing of the smaller groups who play for dances and parties. Come and show us by your presence that you are in sympathy with an organization whose object is to train players, who in a few years will be "grown-up" musicians of our community. Remember the time, the place and the price—Assembly Hall, Friday Evening, May 6th. Admission thirty-five cents.

SAYS COMBINE CONTROLS

Chicago.—Organized capital is "on strike" to crush organized labor and has deliberately planned an era of unemployment, hunger and distress to accomplish this purpose, W. Jett Lauck, economist for railway employees, charged in a brief presented to the United States Railway Labor Board today.

The railway employees played their trump card today when Lauck filed his exhibit, entitled "Human Standards and Railway Policy." Lauck charged that a small group of bankers and financiers control the entire railroad industry and closely allied industries and that they are in a criminal conspiracy to crush labor.

Through a vast system of interlocking directorates, Lauck's brief alleges, the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. virtually controls the entire financial situation as it affects the railroads. Twenty-five men, the statement declares, divide 193 railroad directorships among them and absolutely control 99 Class 1 railroads.

This coterie of interlocking directors, Lauck

"JUST SEEMS TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE"

Mrs. Hopkins Says Nobody Knows How She Suffered Before She Got Tanlac—Feels Fine Now.

"I had suffered fourteen years and was so completely broken down I could not even sweep the floor, but Tanlac has restored my health so perfectly I just know there is not a happier person anywhere than I am," declared Mrs. Dave Hopkins, of McKees Rock, Penna.

"My health broke down in 1906 when I had a severe attack of grippe that lasted all the winter and since then no one knows how I have suffered. I saw but little pleasure in life and it seemed that there was no relief for me. My nerves were worn to a frazzle, and I had fearful headaches that throbbed so I thought they would drive me frantic. At times I just trembled all over, and often I was in agony night and day. I developed an awful case of stomach trouble, and I think I had all the miserable feelings anyone with indigestion can have. I was almost a complete wreck and had to give up my housework altogether. I just worried myself to death nearly and was almost in despair, for my case seemed hopeless.

"When I began taking Tanlac it was merely to be trying something else, for I didn't think it would help me. Well, is it any wonder now that I am so happy? Why, it seems almost too good to be true that I am enjoying such splendid health. My recovery has simply been remarkable, and Tanlac has built me up so wonderfully I seem to have unusual strength and energy. I certainly do feel thankful to be so strong and well, and I just wish I could tell all that is in my heart about Tanlac."—Advertisement.

Bass Drum and Viol in One.

An orchestral percussive instrument that combines the booming resonance of the drum with the range of the double bass viol, according to Popular Mechanics, is the latest in Russian musical novelties. In form it is a combination of both instruments, the four foot finger board being fixed to a skin covered drum.

GOOD BLOOD NEEDED IN SPRINGTIME

People with Poor Appetite, Bad Complexions and "Spring Fever" Need a Blood Tonic

GUDE'S PEPTO-MANGAN IS BEST
Makes Rich Red Blood—Renews Vitality and Increases Body's Resistance to Disease

Spring is the time when good blood is so vital to health. If you do not feel the thrill of Spring in your blood, if you take no pleasure in living, if your appetite is poor, your complexion pallid or muddy, and you tire easily, you can be pretty sure your blood is not up to the mark. So many feel that way in the Spring, housewives who have so much work especially to do. They get over-tired and run-down—their blood becomes weak and thin.

Build up your health now by taking that splendid Spring blood tonic, Gude's Pepto-Mangan. It will give vital power to the red corpuscles in your blood. They will go racing through your blood carrying fresh supplies of oxygen to all the tiny cells. It will help improve your color and your appetite. You'll take more interest in things and enjoy life more. You will stop going around with that tired, all-gone feeling.

Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for thirty years. You can get it at your druggist's in either tablet or liquid form. Take whichever you prefer. They have the same medicinal value. Get the genuine. —Advertisement.

A SYMPOSIUM OF SALADS.

There is never a sameness in the art of salad making, for one has an infinite variety from which to choose raw materials. Cooked food, odds and ends of leftovers which would otherwise be wasted, may go into the salad bowl and become an attractive dish, with a well-prepared and an appropriate dressing.

Fisherman's Salad.

Take two pounds of cooked fish, one pound of boiled potatoes, a quarter of a head of white cabbage; season with salt and pepper. After flaking the fish and shredding the cabbage add cayenne pepper to season well, one pickled beet finely chopped, also two cucumbers. Mix all together and serve with any good salad dressing.

Potato Salad.

The best potato salad is made with potatoes cooked especially for the salad and seasoned before they become cold. Boil small-sized potatoes with their skins on, peel and cut in cubes, add seasonings of salt and pepper and marinate with a thin dressing—either a cooked dressing thinned with cream or a well seasoned French dressing. Dressing them while warm sends the seasoning through them and makes a much more palatable salad. Minced onion, fresh mustard finely minced, a handful of blanched and shredded almonds and a cucumber or two will make the finest kind of a salad, providing the salad dressing is a good well seasoned one. Just before serving add the thick salad dressing and the cucumber unless kept very cold will lose its crispness.

Simple Tomato Salad.

Scald and peel perfectly ripe tomatoes of uniform size. Place in a dish and cover with ice and salt for half an hour to chill thoroughly. Rub a salad bowl with the cut side of a clove of garlic and arrange the crisp, tender leaves of the heart of head lettuce as a lining to the salad bowl. Arrange the tomatoes cut in quarters or if small cut in quarters without separating the pieces and pour over a good mayonnaise dressing which has been seasoned with minced onion.

"My Job Today"

By BARNEY OLDFIELD

A tire blew out, my car gave a lurch, I woke up in a hospital.

There I had plenty of time to firmly determine that, if I was going to keep on betting my life on tires, I would trust only the best that experts could design and build.

So, twenty years ago, I began a series of practical tire experiments which have carried me a good deal further than I ever expected.

I Tore 'Em Up

My laboratory was the race track. Results were quick and sure.

At high speeds, I used and abused all brands, sizes and types of tires, and then studied the results.

Manufacturers began to send new tires for my test, and to ask my advice on their problems. I learned tire materials, workmanship, heat treatment and chemistry.

Eventually I raced only on tires especially built to my own specifications, and under my own supervision

These—the first Oldfield Tires—I proved with sprint and long-distance records that stand to this day unbroken.

Discovered

Soon people who had noticed that, in race after race, I kept going while others changed tires, began to ask me to have similar tires built for them. Without realizing it, I had developed a product and a market.

So I began building Oldfield Tires—Tires every one of which I must be willing to trust with my life.

Hundreds of thousands of these Tires now serve their owners as the first Oldfields served me—with endurance and trouble-freedom new to their whole experience.

Believe Me—

If you were paying me to design and build for you the best set of tires in the whole world, I couldn't do the job as well as I'm doing it for you today. For I'm organized—with Money and Men.

I command permanently, therefore; sources of tire quality and uniformity I could never get for you alone.

Again the records prove me out—Speedway records, where Oldfields last year won the championship, first, second and third—mileage records on road and street that are the boast of every Oldfield owner.

Good Business

And I can follow you wherever you go, with Oldfield service, by merchants who specialize in Oldfield Tires because they believe in them—because they realize it is good business to sell you the most trustworthy tires built.

You'll find one of these Oldfield Tire Merchants on your own "Automobile Row".

In his complete stock, he is holding today the set of Oldfields I've built especially for you.

Stop worrying about doubtful tires! Mount an Oldfield on every wheel!

Repetitious.

We can appreciate the difficulty of the little one who said she knew how to spell "banana" all right, only she didn't know where to stop.—Boston Transcript.

Original Pins.

Until the middle of the sixteenth century the poorer class in England used rude skewers of wood as pins, while the more fortunate had pins made of gold, silver and brass.

Well to Know the Worst

Thirty thousand years ago, says a weekly journal, the seas around England were at a higher level than at present. It is difficult to know what can be done about it but it is just as well that the matter should be mentioned.—London Punch

Intelligent Doing.

A man in proportion as he is intelligent, makes a given force accomplish a greater task, makes skill take the place of muscles, and with less labor gives a better product.—Channing.

Most Sensitive Instrument.

The most sensitive instrument yet made is the bolometer, originally invented by Langley, which is used for measuring variations in the radiation of heat. It registers to a millionth of a degree. The heart of it is a platinum wire so thin that it cannot be seen except when a ray of bright light is reflected from it.

5,144 Lakes in Michigan.

The state of Michigan contains 5,144 inland lakes, covering an area of 1,114 square miles, besides a waterfront on the Great Lakes of 1,850 miles.

They Will Fight Man.

It is said that in England the weasels sometimes hunt in little packs consisting of a dozen or more; and that there are well authenticated cases of their having resented the interference of man, promptly attacking the latter, and absolutely placing him in danger of his life, says the American Forestry Magazine—Washington, D. C.

Catherine de Medici carried the first fold fan ever seen in France.

"Sport Not Worth the Candle."

"It's a poor sport that is not worth the candle" is from George Herbert's "Jacula Prudentum," a collection of proverbs dated 1651, which had appeared in a shorter form as "Outlandish Proverbs" in 1640.

Avocado Rich in Fat.

The avocado or alligator pear contains as much nutritious fat as does ordinary cream, sometimes as high as 20 per cent. As it contains little starch or sugar, it might prove valuable in the diet of diabetics if it did not cost so much.

Man Who Commands Success.

A man who is not enamored of his job who lacks that resolute, determined purpose which knows no defeat, recognizes no failure, is never a success. The man who is victory organized will get up more determined than ever after he is knocked down. The harder the fall the greater the rebound. You can't top such a man down you can't discourage him any more than you can a discharged Napoleon. For his victory is his character will not let such his home his property and his material thing he possess a sweet away. New Success.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE ITEMS

Uniontown.—Their clothes nearly torn from them and suffering from bruises and shock, Mrs. Ida Roberts, 19, and Mrs. Mary Randall, 22, of Buffalo, N. Y., were found in an automobile on the outskirts of this city. John Dougherty, aged 23, and Charles Robbins, aged 25, both of Palmer, O., found in the machine with the young women, were arrested.

Pittsburgh.—Judge Orr, in the United States district court, after finding Stephen Zalenski $10 following a plea of guilty to an indictment returned against him in 1918, granted him 60 days in which to pay the fine. Zalenski, who was charged with having in his possession candy stolen from an interstate freight shipment, told the court he had been working only two days a week. Russell F. Matz, of Altoona, alleged participant in the robbery of the postoffice at Schenectady, January 22, and arrested at Bellvue by a United States marshal, was released on $3000 bail for his appearance in federal court in Philadelphia.

Uniontown.—That there are one or two cases of sleeping sickness in the Uniontown Hospital became known. One of the patients is Mary Sherin, 20 years old, who resides near Uniontown. She has been sleeping for some time, physicians say, being aroused at intervals to receive nourishment. She has been suffering from the disease for about three weeks.

Harrisburg.—An undertaker's bill running for eleven years was recommended to the House by its appropriation committee for payment. It is for N. D. Jacobs, an undertaker at Mont Alto, who has been looking after burial of unclaimed bodies at the State Sanitarium at that place. He never has been paid and an appropriation of $3215 for him was authorized.

Uniontown.—Contending that her daughter, Margaret, was adopted without her knowledge by Braden "and Helen Queer, Mrs. Emma Russell, of Connellsville, presented a petition to court to have the adoption decree revoked. She claimed that she could have been located at the time of the adoption if the proper effort had been made.

Harrisburg.—The state will borrow $15,000,000 under the $50,000,000 road loan this summer, asking bids about July 1, and $11,200,000 in 1922, according to a letter sent to the legislature by Governor Sprout. This communication was under requirement of the bond act of 1919, which calls for a report to the general assembly. The state already has issued $28,800,000 in two series, one at 4 1/2 and the other at 4 1/4 per cent interest.

Renovo.—Benjamin Alexander, aged 40 years, a well-known hotelkeeper of Madera, who was a member of a fishing party at the Archie Simpson camp four miles from Keating, this county, was found dead in the woods not far from the camp by members of his party. Alexander left camp on Saturday and it is supposed he died that day, as he informed his companions that he was not feeling well as he started through the woods for Keating. When other members of the party broke camp and started for Keating on account of the cold weather, they came upon the body of Alexander, lying face downward on the path about two miles from camp.

Connellsville.—How $300 in an envelope lay on the ground near the Mill Run station, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, for several hours without being noticed, although many persons passed it, is told by Misses Fern Colborn and Emogene Bigam, students of the Connellsville high school. The girls, while awaiting a train, tossed a ball around. One placed the money on the ground so as to be able to catch the ball and then forgot it. Their train had gone only a few miles from Mill Run when the girls discovered their loss and informed the conductor, who stopped the train. They returned to the spot and found the money intact.

Pittsburgh.—Russell Hay, of Buffalo student of a Pittsburgh college, arrested in connection with the disappearance of several automobiles, was held for criminal court on a charge of larceny when arraigned in police court. CATTLE FEEDERS' DAY

Cattle Feeders of Bedford County will be interested to know that the Annual Cattle Feeders' Day at The Pennsylvania State College has been set for May 5th—an all day session. Professor Thomhave has arranged for a well rounded out program which will include short speeches by President Thomas, and Dean Watts to open the morning session at 10:00 A. M. This will be followed by a discussion on experimental feeding at the Indiana Experiment Station, Purdue, by F. G. King.

At 1:30 the results of this year's feeding tests will be explained after which the meeting will be adjourned to the steer feeding pens for an inspection of the different lots of steers.

Realizing that all steer feeders maintain in their bones a fondness to witness the true unadulterated range method of lassoing and tying steers a "real western show" will be put on in the afternoon. "Buck" Irving will demonstrate how they rope 'em out west. An outlaw horse has been secured for Buck to saddle and ride. All told it will be a good day of "real meat" "sound facts" and enough spice to keep everyone good natured.

Much interest is shown in the four corn variety tests to be conducted this year by the Farm Bureau and the communities cooperating. Farmers are now assisting County Agent L. R. Molenauer in finding pure samples of the most popular types in their communities which will be planted in test plots to determine their value as to yield and maturity. It has been planned to continue the tests in Morrison's Cove, Friend's Cove and Fishertown this year and in addition start one in Snake Spring Valley.

Germination tests on 18 varieties are under way now in preparation for planting in the near future.

Queer Idea of Beauty
Beauty makes for a happy way for adornment in some lands. Many Japanese women adopt the singular habit of giving their teeth in some sections of the country a black wash. It is dyed black by a wash which is thought beautiful by the women of the country. The color of the teeth is of red and black and the women only the black and yellow.

"Blue Nose."

Blue Nose is a popular name for a native of Nova Scotia. Unithurton, in "Sassie Slick" gives the following account of its origin: "Tray sir," said one of my fellow passengers "can you tell me why the Nova Scotians are called Blue Noses?" It is the name of a potato, said I, which they produce in the greatest perfection, and boast to be the best in the world. The Americans have in consequence given them the nickname "Blue Noses."

Chapter III

"You are private secretary to the new general manager of the Pioneer Short Line, Jimmie, and your salary begins to-day," he said, briskly. "Now let's go up to the hotel and get our fighting clothes on."

CHAPTER IV

"Heads Off, Gentlemen!"

Gosh all Friday—say! but the next few days did see a tear-up to beat the band on the old Short Line! With the printing of his appointment circular, Mr. Norcross took the offices in the headquarters building lately vacated by Mr. Shaffer, and it was something awful to see the way the heads went into the basket. One by one he called the Duntontons in; the traffic manager, the general superintendent, the roadmaster, the master-mechanic—clear on down to the round-house foreman and the division heads.

Some few of them were allowed to take the oath of allegiance and stay, but the place-fillers and pay-roll parasites, the cousins and the nephews and the brothers-in-law, every last man of them had to walk under the ax.

Three days later, when the whole town was talking about the new "Jack the Ripper," as they called him, Kirgan, who had been our head machinery man on the Midland construction, tumbled in in answer to a wire. Mr. Norcross slammed him into place ten minutes after he hit the town.

"Your office is across the tracks, Kirgan," he told him. "I've begun the house-cleaning over there by firing your predecessor and three or four of his pet foremen. Get in the hole and dig to the bottom. I'll give you six months in which to make good as a model superintendent of motive power. Get busy."

"That's me," said Kirgan, who knew the boss up one side and down the other. "You give me the engines, and I'll keep 'em out of the shop." And with that he went across the yard and took hold, before he had even hunted up a place to sleep in.

Mr. Van Britt, our general superintendent, was the next man to show up. He was fine; a square-built, stocky little gentleman who looked as if he'd always had the world by the ear and never meant to let go.

"Well, I'm here," he said, dropping into a chair and sitting with his legs wide apart. And then, ignoring me as if I hadn't been there, "Graham, what the devil have you got against me, that you should drag me out here on the edge of nowhere and make me go to work for a living?"

The boss just grinned at him and said: "It's for the good of your soul, Upton. You've too much money. Your office is up at the end of the corridor and your chair is empty and waiting for you. Your appointment circular has already been mailed out."

Mr. Hornack was the last of the new office staff to fall in, though he didn't have nearly as far to come as some of the others. He was red-headed and wore glasses. They used to say of him on the Overland Central that he could make business grow where none ever grew before, and that's what a traffic man lives for.

Naturally, the big turn-over brought all sorts of disturbances at the send-off. Some of the relieved cousins and nephews stayed in town and jumped in to stir up trouble for the new management. The Herald, which was the other morning paper, took up for the down-and-outs, and there wasn't anything too mean for it to say about the boss and his new appointees. Then the employees got busy and the grievance committees began to pour in. Mr. Norcross never denied himself to anybody. The office-door stood wide open and the kickers were welcomed, as you might say, with open arms.

"You men are going to get the squardest deal you have ever had, and a still squarer one a little farther along, if you will only stay on the job and keep your clothes on," was the way the boss went at the trainmen's committee. "We are out to make the P. S. L. the best line for service, and the best company to work for, this side of the Missouri river. I want your loyalty; the loyalty of every man in the service. I'll go further and say that the new management will stand if you and the other pay-roll men stand by it in good faith, or it will fall if you don't."

"You'll meet the grievance committees and talk things over with them when there's a kick coming?" said old Tom McClure, the passenger conductor who was acting as spokesman. "Sure I will—every time. More than that, I'll take a leaf out of Colonel Goethal's book and keep open house here in this office every Sunday morning. Any man in the service who thinks he has a grievance may come here and state it, and if he has a case, he'll get justice."

Naturally, a few little talks like this, face to face with the men themselves, soon began to put new life into the rank and file. Mr. Norcross' old pet name of "Hell-and-repeat" had followed him down from Oregon, as it was bound to, but now it began to be used in the sense that most railroad men use the phrase, "The Old Man," in speaking of a big boss that they like.

There was so much crowded into these first few weeks that I've forgotten half of it. The work we did, pulling and hauling things into shape, was a fright, and my end of the job got so big that the boss had to give me help. Following out his own policy, he let me pick my man, and after I'd had a little talk with Mr. Van Britt, I picked Fred May, a young fellow who had been under Van Burgh. He was all right; a little too tonguey, perhaps, but a worker from away back, and that was what we were looking for.

Out of this frantic hustle to get things started and moving right, anybody could have pulled a couple of conclusions that stuck up higher than any of the rest. The boss and Mr. Van Britt were steadily winning the rank and file over to something like loyalty on the one hand, and on the other wherever we went, we found the people who were paying the freight a solid unit against us, hating us like blazes and entirely unwilling to believe that any good thing could come out of the Nazareth of the Pioneer Short Line.

As soon as we returned from our first inspection trip, the boss pulled out his coat—figuratively speaking—and rolled up his sleeves. It wasn't his way to talk much about what he was going to do; he'd jump in and do it first, and then talk about it afterward—if anybody insisted on knowing the reason why.

There were long private conferences with Mr. Ripley, the bright young lawyer Mr. Chadwick had sent us from Chicago, and with a young fellow named Juneman, an ex-newspaper man who was on the pay-rolls as "Advertising Manager," but whose real business seemed to be to keep the Short Line public fully and accurately informed of everything that most railroad companies try to keep to themselves.

The next innovation that came along was another young Chicago man named Billoughby, and his title on the pay-roll was "Special Agent." I, who was as close to the boss as anybody in our outfit, never once suspected the true nature of Billoughby's job until the day he came in to make his final report—and Mr. Norcross let him make it without sending me out on an errand. "Well, I think I'm ready to talk, Johnson, now," was the way Billoughby began. "Red Tower is the one outfit we'll have to kill off and put out of business. Under one name or another, it is engineering every graft in this country; it is even backing the fake mining boom at Saw Horse—to which, by the way, this railroad company is now building a branch line."

Mr. Norcross turned to me: "Jimmie, make a note to tell Mr. Van Britt to have the work stopped at once on the Saw Horse branch, and all the equipment brought in."

And then to Billoughby: "Go on." "The main graft, of course, is in the grain elevators, the fruit packeries, the coal and lumber yards and the stock yards and handling corrals. In these public, or quasi-public, utilities the railroad has given them—in fee simple, it seems—all the yard room, switches, track facilities, and the like. Wherever local competition has tried to break in, the railroad company has given it the cold shoulder and it has been either forced out or frozen out."

"Exactly," said the boss. "Now tell me how far you have gone in the other field."

"We are pretty well shaped up and are about ready to begin business. Juneman has done splendid work, and so has Ripley. We have succeeded, in a measure, though the opposition has been keeping up a steady bombardment. Hatch and his people haven't been idle. They own or control a dozen or more prominent newspapers in the state, and, as you know, they are making an open fight on you and your management through these papers. The net result so far has been merely to keep the people stirred up and doubtful. They say that the railroad has never played fair—and I guess it hasn't, in the past."

"Not within a thousand miles," was the boss' curt comment. "But go on with your story."

"We pulled the new deal off yesterday, simultaneously in eleven of the principal towns along the line. Meetings of the bankers and local capitalists were held, and we had a man at each one of them to explain our plan and to pledge the backing of the railroad. Notwithstanding all the doubt and dust that's been kicked up by the Hatch people, it went like wild-fire."

"With money?" queried the boss. "Yes; with real money. Citizens' Storage & Warehouse was launched, as you might say, on the spot, and enough capital was subscribed to make it a going concern. Of course, there were some doubters, and some few greedy ones. The greedy ones protested against the fixed dividend scheme; they didn't see why the new company shouldn't be allowed to cut a melon now and then if it should be fortunate enough to grow one."

Mr. Norcross smiled. "That is precisely what the Hatch people have been doing, all along, and it is the chief grievance of these same people who now want a chance to outbid their neighbors. The lease condition was fully explained to them, wasn't it?"

"Oh, yes; Ripley saw to that, and copies of the lease were in the exhibits. The new company is to have railroad ground to build on, and ample track facilities in perpetuity, conditioned strictly upon the limited dividend. If the dividend is increased, the leases terminate automatically."

The boss drew a long breath. "You've done well, and better than well, Billoughby," he said. "Now we are ready to fire the blast. How was the proposal to take over the Red Tower properties at a fair valuation received?"

"There was some opposition. Let's turn, and three of the other larger towns, want to build their own plants. But they agreed to abide by a majority vote of the stock on that point, and my wire reports this morning say that a lump-sum offer will be made for the Red Tower plants today."

Mr. Norcross sat back in his chair and blew a cloud of cigar smoke toward the ceiling.

"Hatch won't sell," he predicted. "He'll be up here before night with blood in his eye. I'm rather glad it has come down to the actual give and take. I don't play the waiting game very successfully, Billoughby. Keep in touch, and keep me in touch. And tell Ripley to keep on pushing on the reins. The sooner we get at it, the sooner it will be over."

After Billoughby had gone, Mr. Norcross came at me on a little matter that had been allowed to sleep ever since the day, now some time back, when I had given him Mrs. Sheila's hint about the identity of the two men who had sat and smoked in the auto that Sunday night at Sand Creek siding, and about the talk between the same two that I had overheard the following morning.

"We are going to have sharp trouble with a gentleman by the name of Hatch before very long, Jimmie," was the way he began. "You remember what you told me about that Monday morning talk between Hatch and Henckel in the Bullard lobby. Would you be willing to go into court as a witness and swear to what you heard?"

"Sure I would," I said. "All right. I may have to pull that little incident on Mr. Hatch before I get through with him. The train hold-up was a criminal act, and you are the witness who can convict the pair of them. Of course, we'll leave Mrs. Macrae and the little girl entirely out of it. Nobody knows that they were there with us, and nobody need know."

I agreed to that, and this mention of Mrs. Sheila and Maisie Ann makes me remember that I've been leaving them out pretty severely for a good long while. They weren't left out in reality—not by a jugful. In spite of all the rush and hustle, the boss had found time to get acquainted with Major Basil Kendrick and had been made at home in the transplanted Kentucky mansion in the northern suburb.

But to get back on the firing line. I wasn't around when Mr. Norcross had his "declaration of war" talk with Hatch. Mr. Norcross, being pretty sure he wasn't going to have that evening off, had sent me out to "Kendwood" with a note and a box of roses, and when I got back to the office about eight o'clock, Hatch was just going away. I met him on the stair.

The boss was sitting back in his big swing chair, smoking, when I broke in. He looked as if he'd been mixing it up good and plenty with Mr. Rufus Hatch—and enjoying it.

"We've got 'em going, Jimmie," he chuckled; and he said it without asking me how I had found Mrs. Sheila, or how she was looking, or anything.

I told him I had met Mr. Hatch on the stair going down.

"He didn't say anything to you, did he?" he asked.

"Not a word."

"I had to pull that Sand Creek business on him, and I'm rather sorry," he went on. "He and his people are going to fight the new company to a finish, and he merely came up here to tell me so—and to add that I might as well resign first as last, because, in the end, he'd get my goat. When I laughed at him he got abusive. He's an ugly beggar, Jimmie."

"That's what everybody says of him."

"It's true. He and his crowd have plenty of money—stolen money, a good deal of it—and they stand in with every political boss and gangster in the state. There is only one way to handle such a man, and that is with gloves. I told him we had the goods on him in the matter of Mr. Chadwick's kidnapping adventure. At first he said I couldn't prove it. Then he broke out cursing and let your name slip. I hadn't mentioned you at all, and so he gave himself away. He knows who you are, and he remembered that you had overheard his talk with Henckel in the hotel lobby."

I heard what he was saying. But I didn't really sense it because my head was ram jam full of a thing that was so pitiful that it had kept me swallowing hard all the way back from Major Kendrick's. It was this way. When I had jiggled the bell out at the house it was Maisie Ann who let me in and took the box of flowers and the boss' note. We sat in the dimly lighted hall and talked for a few minutes.

One thing she told me was that Mrs. Sheila had company and the name of it was Mr. Van Britt. That wasn't strictly news because I had known that Mr. Van Britt was dividing time pretty evenly with the boss in the Major Kendrick house visits. That wasn't anything to be scared up about. But my chunky little girl didn't stop at that.

"I think we can let Mr. Van Britt take care of himself," she said. "He has known Cousin Sheila for a long time, and I guess they are only just good friends. But there is something you ought to know, Jimmie—for Mr. Norcross' sake. He has been sending lots of flowers and things, and Cousin Sheila has been taking them because—well, I guess it's just because she doesn't know how not to take them."

"Go on," I said, but my mouth had suddenly grown dry.

"Such things—flowers, you know—don't mean anything in New York, where we've been living. Men send them to their women friends just as they pass their cigar-cases around among their men friends. But I'm afraid it's different with Mr. Norcross."

"It is different," I said.

Then she told me the thing that made me swell up and want to burst.

"It mustn't be different, Jimmie. Cousin Sheila's married, you know."

"I know she has been married," I corrected; and then she gave me the sure-enough knock-out.

"She is married now, and her husband is still living."

For a little while I couldn't do anything but gape like a chicken with the pip. It was simply fierce! I knew, as well as I knew anything that the boss was gone on Mrs. Sheila; that he had fallen in love, first with the back of her neck and then with her pretty face and then with all of her; and that the one big reason why he had let Mr. Chadwick stay in Portland—that he had wanted to show her how fectly good spoon out of the spoiled horn of the Pioneer Short Line.

When I began to get my grip back a little I was right warm under the collar.

"She oughtn't to be going around telling people she is a widow!" I blurted out.

"She doesn't," was the calm reply. "They've separated, you know—years ago—and Cousin Sheila has taken her mother's maiden name, Macrae. If we were going to live here always it would be different. But we are only visiting Cousin Basil, or I suppose we are, though we've been here now for nearly a year."

There wasn't much more to be said, and pretty soon I had staggered off with my load and gone back to the office. And this was why I couldn't get very deep into the Hatch business with Mr. Norcross when he told me what he had been obliged to do about the Sand Creek hold-up.

If he had been like other men it wouldn't have been so hard. But I had a feeling that he had gone into this love business just as he did into everything—neck or nothing—burning his bridges behind him, and having no notion of ever turning back. The boss had never been beaten. What was it going to do to him when he learned the truth about Mrs. Sheila?

On top of this came the still harder knock when I saw that it was up to me to tell him. I remembered all the stories I'd ever heard about how the most cold-blooded surgeon that ever lived wouldn't trust himself to stick a knife into a member of his own family, and I knew now just how the surgeon felt about it.

While I was still sweating under the big load Maisie Ann had dumped upon me, the night dispatcher's boy came in with a message. It was from Mr. Chadwick, and I read it with my eyes bulging out. This is what it said: "To G. Norcross, G. M., "Portal City."

Johnstown, Pa.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery restored my little boy to health when all else had failed. He is about three years old and had the influenza and pneumonia from which he could not seem to recover. He could not eat and would cough so at night that he could not sleep. He became weak and thin, nothing I gave him helped him. I had about given up the idea that he would ever be well when I was advised to give him the Discovery in small doses and it has completely cured him. Wanted to Remain Awhile.

Betty was looking rather poorly after several weeks illness. Aunt Edith, who had not seen her since she was a tiny baby, after kissing her, turned to her mother and said rather thoughtlessly: "My how thin she is! She looks as if a whiff of wind would blow her away." This must have worried Betty all day for that night when she had finished all the customary "God blesses" in her prayer she added this earnest postscript: "And please God, make me thicker for I don't want to be blown away."

Opportunity Gone.

While talking to a caller one day I was annoyed by the interruption of my four-year-old daughter who was trying to tell something exciting. I reminded her that it was impolite to interrupt me and went on with my story. When I had finished I turned to her, saying: "Now Louise, what did you want to tell me?" She answered disconsolately: "I've lost my story now."—Exchange.

Now at LOWER PRICES

In view of the recent reduction in the price of steel, we now announce lower prices for our entire line of farm machines and implements not covered by reductions previously announced.

GLENDORA COFFEE

is packed in air tight tin cans which assures the consumer of receiving the delicious flavor just as it left the roaster.

Most coffees are packed in bags and fibre containers which absorb all the essential oils and permits the coffee to deteriorate.

During the war we did not use tin cans as it was necessary to conserve the tin for our government in the prosecution of the war but our experience with fibre was very unsatisfactory and as soon as possible we adopted tin for no other container will retain the flavor and goodness of the coffee so much sought for by lovers of good coffee.

Costs no more than average coffee packed in ordinary fibre carton.
